This policy aims to standardize the offboarding process across all types of employment and separation to manage records of the exiting employee and minimize, if not completely block, security threats through the return of all company-issued properties and disablement of system access.

4 Policy

4.1 Employee Separation

4.1.1 Voluntary

All resigning employees are governed by the Labor Code of the Philippines and the applicable rules and regulations enforced by the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE). An employee who intends to resign without just cause is required to submit a written notice of resignation to the employer at least thirty (30) calendar days or one (1) month in advance, unless a shorter period is approved by the Company. Eligibility for re-employment of former employees shall be solely at the discretion of the Company, subject to applicable policies and business requirements. A resigning employee must remain active in the system to receive their final payout.

A resignation shall be deemed effective upon the occurrence of either of the following, whichever comes first:

- Completion of the required thirty (30)-day notice period; or
- An earlier effective date expressly approved or waived by the Company.

4.1.2 Immediate Resignation

Requests for immediate resignation may be subject to Company review. The Company may require the submission of reasonable supporting documentation, when applicable, to validate the basis cited.

In accordance with the Labor Code and DOLE regulations, an employee may resign without serving the thirty (30)-day notice period under justifiable circumstances, including but not limited to the following:

- When the employee's honor and dignity have been gravely insulted by the employer or the employer's duly authorized representative;
- When the employee is subjected to inhuman, harsh, or abusive treatment by the employer or the employer's representative;
- When the employer has committed a crime or offense against the employee or any of the employee's immediate family members; and
- Other analogous causes of a similar nature that render continued employment unreasonable or untenable.

4.1.3 Withdrawal of Resignation

Any request to withdraw or retract a submitted resignation shall be subject to Company review. The Company reserves the discretion to approve or deny such request based on business requirements and operational considerations.

4.2.1 Involuntary

An employee who fails to comply with Company policies, procedures, and processes shall be subject to appropriate disciplinary action, in accordance with the Company's Code of Conduct, applicable Company policies, and the requirements of procedural due process under Philippine labor laws.

The Company may terminate an employee without payment of separation pay for just causes, as provided under Article 297 of the Labor Code of the Philippines (formerly Article 282), after observance of the required due process.

4.3 Employee Clearance Process

The employee is required to complete the clearance process on their last working day or prior to the start of any approved leave taken during the final days of employment. The Company shall release the employee's final pay within thirty (30) days from the date the clearance process has been successfully completed, subject to compliance with all clearance requirements.

In the event that the employee fails to comply with the clearance requirements, including the return of Company-issued assets or tools of trade that are damaged, incomplete, or unreturned, the Company reserves the right to deduct the cost of such damage, loss, or non-return, as provided in the employee's Employment Agreement and other pertinent company policies.

4.4 Employee Accountability

Upon separation from the Company, the employee is responsible for ensuring that all accountabilities are fully cleared to avoid any deductions from their final pay.

4.4.1 Clearance of Accountabilities

 - SSS loans
